

Seven days with Dragon Spirit

Seven original Tarot cards. Seven invitations to reflect. Start with one card a day, or choose the image that calls to you.

This is a small public sampler, not the full companion guide. No prediction is required. Your own perspective comes first.

Day 1: The Fool

A small beginning

You do not need the whole map to notice the next step. Pair curiosity with one practical safeguard.

A question for today

What is a small beginning you can make without abandoning your responsibilities?

My reflection

Day 2: Strength

Gentle courage

Steadiness can be quiet. Notice where patience and a clear boundary might serve you better than force.

A question for today

Where could a gentler approach still be a strong one?

My reflection

Day 3: The Hermit

Room to listen

A little distance can make your own priorities easier to hear. Seek a pause, rather than a perfect answer.

A question for today

What becomes clearer when you turn down one source of noise?

My reflection

Day 4: Temperance

A workable balance

Balance is something you adjust. Look for a proportion that fits this season of your life.

A question for today

What needs a little more room, and what could take a little less?

My reflection

Day 5: The Star

A thread of hope

Hope can begin with something ordinary and dependable. Name a source of support you can return to.

A question for today

What gives you a small, realistic sense of possibility?

My reflection

Day 6: The Sun

Notice what is good

Give one good thing your full attention.
Joy does not have to erase difficulty to deserve a place.

A question for today

What simple thing would you like to enjoy more deliberately today?

My reflection

Day 7: The World

Carry the lesson forward

An ending can hold both satisfaction and unfinished feelings. Notice what you learned and what you want to carry onward.

A question for today

What will you keep from this week, and what are you ready to set down?

My reflection

Carry the curiosity forward

Which image stayed with you? What is one small action you want to carry into the next week?
